A MESSAGE FROM THE DEAN

Gazing out my office windows over the years, I have been inspired by the sight of the ever-changing lake. Equally revitalizing are the constant changes in the Bienen School itself, with the arrival of each new class of students and the new artists and scholars who join our illustrious faculty. Now this summer brings a change that the school has experienced only six times in its century-and-a-quarter history, as I step down after two decades as dean.

I am grateful for the support of three Northwestern presidents—Henry Bienen, Morty Schapiro, and now Michael Schill—and from all the alumni and friends who have generously made donations and loyally attended school events around the country and the world. As I mentioned in my first Fanfare letter in 2004, an important personal goal of my deanship has been developing and maintaining close relationships with music alumni. I have enjoyed meeting many of you over the years and appreciate your continued support and engagement with the school.

My tenure at the school has brought many significant initiatives, from establishing the Institute for New Music and two prestigious international prizes to successfully weathering a global pandemic that particularly affected the performing arts. And it is gratifying to know that our endeavors will continue to benefit students in the years ahead, particularly through the contributions of our distinguished faculty. During the next two years students will also enjoy campus residencies by 2023 Michael Ludwig Nemmers Prize in Music Composition winner Tania León, an esteemed composer and conductor I have known since we performed together at the 1990 National Black Arts Festival. We also look forward to residencies by the 2023 recipient of the Jean Gimbel Lane Prize in Piano Performance.

Most gratifying of all is the knowledge that our future students, faculty, and staff will pursue their work in the magnificent Patrick G. and Shirley W. Ryan Center for the Musical Arts. Each time I enter the center’s awe-inspiring lobby, I am moved by its beauty, and I smile when hearing the appreciative comments of visitors touring the building or attending concerts. When the first architectural designs were solicited, I envisioned a building where our community could look aspirationally toward the great city of Chicago and where Chicago, in turn, could see the excellence of our school. That vision is now fulfilled.

On a more personal level, I am delighted to be able to assist future students through the Toni-Marie Montgomery/Mattie Drayton Undergraduate Piano Scholarship, a bequest to honor my mother for all she did in furthering my musical career and to do the same for new generations of pianists. Henry and Leigh Bienen are generously spearheading a fundraising initiative honoring my 20-year tenure as dean. These new funds will allow the scholarship to be awarded during my lifetime, before my bequest is established.

Although I am stepping down as dean, I will remain a faculty member in the Bienen School. Additionally, I will continue to serve as a trustee of both the Chicago Symphony Orchestra Association and Ravinia Festival and as board secretary of the Gateways Music Festival. Next April the Gateways Festival Orchestra will perform a concert under the auspices of Chicago Symphony Presents, and I am currently planning the organization’s weeklong residency at the Bienen School.

It has been an immense privilege serving as dean of the Bienen School of Music. I am proud that the work we have accomplished together over these two decades has greatly enhanced the national and international reputation of this extraordinary institution.

Bienen Faculty, Alumni Net 2023 Grammy Wins and Nominations

Donald Nally, director of choral organizations, was among this year’s Bienen School Grammy winners. The Crossing, his professional choir, shares in the best choral performance award. Nally’s third, for Born, an album featuring the music of Michael Gilbertson and Edie Hill.

Alumni performers on Born include Micah Dingler ’09 MMus, Dimitri German ’16 MMus, Michael Jones ’14 MMus, Lauren Kelly ’19 MMus, Chelsea Lyons ’17 MMus, James Reese ’15, Tiana Sorenson ’19 MMus, and Elisa Sutherland ’12, ’14 MMus. Kevin Vondrak ’17 MMus was assistant conductor and coproducer.

The Crossing and Nally previously won Grammys in 2018 for The Fifth Century and in 2019 for Zealot Canticles. They have received eight total Grammy nominations in the best choral performance category over seven consecutive years.

Several other Bienen School alumni and faculty were represented among this year’s Grammy nominees. Third Coast Percussion—Sean Connors ’06 MMus; Robert Dillon ’02; Peter Martin ’04 MMus, ’11 DMus; and David Skidmore ’05—and its album Perspectives were nominated for best chamber music/small ensemble performance. The album was also nominated for best engineered classical album. Third Coast previously won in 2017 for Steve Reich and received nominations for Archetypes (2022), Fields (2021), and Perpetulum (2020).

Dover Quartet, the Bienen School Quartet-in-Residence since 2015, was nominated for best chamber music/small ensemble performance for Beethoven: Complete String Quartets, Volume 2—The Middle Quartets. The quartet also performed with Ian Rosenbaum on Andy Akiho’s Ligneous Suite, nominated for best contemporary classical composition. Dover was previously nominated in 2021 for The Schumann Quartets. Its current members are Joel Link and Bryan Lee, violin; Hezekiah Leung, viola; and Camden Shaw, cello.
Tania León Awarded 2023 Nemmers Prize in Music Composition

Cuban American composer and conductor Tania León has been awarded the $100,000 Michael Ludwig Nemmers Prize in Music Composition by the Bienen School of Music. Established in 2003, the biennial prize honors classical music composers of outstanding achievement who have significantly influenced the field of composition.

“I am delighted and deeply honored to receive the Nemmers Prize in Music,” León says. “I look forward to working with and getting to know the excellent students, faculty, and ensembles of the school over the next two years.”

León’s first on-campus residency, planned for winter 2024, will feature performances of her music by Bienen students as well as other activities, such as coaching sessions with ensembles and lessons and seminars with composition students. León’s second residency will take place during the 2024-25 academic year.

“Tania León and I first met at the 1990 National Black Arts Festival in Atlanta, where she conducted and I performed as pianist,” says Dean Toni-Marie Montgomery. “I have long been an admirer of Ms. León’s compositions as well as her impressive and varied career. Bienen School students and faculty will benefit immensely from her inspiring presence on campus over the next two years. Awarding Tania León the 2023 Michael Ludwig Nemmers Prize is a personal highlight of my 20 years at Northwestern.”

León is highly regarded as a composer, conductor, educator, and adviser to arts organizations. Her orchestral work Stride, commissioned by the New York Philharmonic, received the 2021 Pulitzer Prize in Music. In 2022 she received a Kennedy Center Honor for lifetime artistic achievement. Most recently, the London Philharmonic Orchestra announced León as its next composer in residence, a post she will hold for two seasons beginning in September 2023.

A founding member and the first music director of the Dance Theatre of Harlem, León instituted the Brooklyn Philharmonic Community Concert Series, cofounded the American Composers Orchestra’s Sonidos de las Americas Festivals, was new-music adviser to the New York Philharmonic, and is the founder and artistic director of Composers Now, a presenting, commissioning, and advocacy organization for living composers.

Sir András Schiff Presents Second Lane Prize Residency

A sold-out Skyline Piano Artist Series recital and a piano master class were the highlights of Sir András Schiff’s second Bienen School residency as winner of the 2021 Jean Gimbel Lane Prize in Piano Performance.

“Meeting and playing for Sir András Schiff was truly a dream come true,” says Chelsea Wang, a doctoral student of James Giles. “He has been one of my biggest musical inspirations, so being able to play Bach for him and hear his feedback was a special experience that I will deeply cherish for a very long time.”

Born in Budapest, Schiff founded the chamber orchestra Cappella Andrea Barca and works closely with the Chamber Orchestra of Europe, the Budapest Festival Orchestra, and the Orchestra of the Age of Enlightenment, where he became an associated artist in 2018. His many honors include the International Mozarteum Foundation’s Golden Medal, Germany’s Great Cross of Merit with Star, a knighthood for services to music, and a doctorate from the Royal College of Music.

Established in 2005, the biennial Jean Gimbel Lane Prize in Piano Performance honors pianists who have achieved the highest levels of national and international recognition. Winners receive a $50,000 cash award and spend two to three nonconsecutive weeks in residence at the Bienen School.
New music has played an important role at Northwestern University for many years. From the long list of alumni who have become leaders in the field to the school’s ties to Chicago’s contemporary music scene, and from the distinguished collection of contemporary music at University Libraries to the establishment of the Nemmers Prize in Music Composition, Northwestern has long supported the music of our time. Established by Bienen School dean Toni-Marie Montgomery in fall 2012 as a cornerstone of the school’s strategic plan, the Institute for New Music has strengthened and increased our new-music activities and become a center for those activities on campus, distinguishing the school as a leading American institution for contemporary music.

The three focus areas defined at the institute’s founding still hold true today. First, it invites leading performers and composers in the field to work with students and faculty. The Nemmers Prize plays a central role, bringing John Adams, Kaija Saariaho, Oliver Knussen, and other important composers of today to campus for residencies. The institute also hosts numerous contemporary-music composers, performers, and scholars each quarter, providing invaluable opportunities for students from all areas of the school to engage with leaders in the field.

A second focus area is the school’s Contemporary Music Ensemble (CME), which provides a wide range of performance experiences for students and has presented many notable concerts. Memorable performances include the now legendary concert featuring Steve Reich’s Music for 18 Musicians, the ensemble’s participation at two Chicago Ear Taxi Festivals, a collaboration with Jennifer Walshe on her experimental score Hygiene, and the performance of Helmut Lachenmann’s Mouvement—one of the most demanding pieces written in recent decades. Without a doubt, CME has grown into an excellent ensemble that performs some of the most challenging scores of our time.

The institute’s third focus is the large-scale conference and festival NUNC! Every two years, Northwestern’s campus turns into a new-music nerve center, presenting current developments... in composition, performance, and scholarship. Through calls for scores, performances, and presentations, an entire generation of new-music enthusiasts from all areas of our field has participated in the conference, as have Bienen students and faculty. NUNC! has brought numerous guest artists and scholars to campus in its five iterations, including Brian Ferneyhough, Anna Thorvaldsdottir, Julia Wolfe, Claire Chase, Ted Hearne, the Jack Quartet, Ensemble Dal Niente, Third Coast Percussion, and the Arditti Quartet.

Behind these many activities lies an understanding of new music that is based on the idea of fostering collaboration. It has become clear that artists—at least in the field of music—can no longer rely solely on their own practice but must work with others to address today’s artistic questions. The long-lasting collaboration of students and faculty from different areas of the Bienen School that the institute has initiated is, for me, our most important success story. None of this would have been possible without the people who have supported this endeavor from the beginning: my codirector in the first two years, Timothy McAllister; the codirectors of CME, Alan Pierson and Ben Bolter; the composition faculty; numerous other faculty members who have lent their support, including Donald Nally, Taimur Sullivan, Ryan Dohoney, Joachim Schamberger, and She-e Wu; institute assistant Chelsea Lyons and her predecessors; and director of concert management Jerry Tietz and the Concerts at Bienen staff.

As I reflect on the past 10 years of the institute and prepare to step down as director at the end of the academic year, I am proud of the many graduate and undergraduate students who have filled the institute with their musicianship, creativity, and artistic spirit. Thanks to a new endowment by a generous donor, the Bienen School will continue to expand the important work of the Institute for New Music for years to come. I look forward to the next decade and beyond of new-music collaboration and innovation at Northwestern.
Opera Season Features Midwest Premiere

In November, Northwestern University Opera Theater presented the Midwest premiere of In a Grove, composed by Christopher Cerrone with a libretto by Stephanie Fleischmann. Directed by Joachim Schamberger, the production featured the Contemporary Music Ensemble under conductor Alan Pierson. The Bienen School’s performances marked the work’s second production; it premiered at Pittsburgh Opera in early 2022.

Based on a short story by Ryūnosuke Akutagawa that provided the plot and characters for Akira Kurosawa’s 1950 film Rashomon, the opera is set in the ghostly remains of a Pacific Northwest forest in 1921. After an aspiring botanist goes missing and her schoolteacher husband appears to have been murdered, seven witnesses, some of whom are also suspects, provide testimony about events that transpired in a mountain grove. Each new revelation draws the audience deeper into an examination of the subjective nature of truth and the human experience.

Cerrone returned to campus to work with opera students and faculty following Bienen School collaborations on the spring 2022 world premiere of The Last Message Received and a performance of his work The Branch Will Not Break in 2020.

“It’s been a total joy to work with these students,” Cerrone says. “The quality of their performance is very high. They have all been really wonderful and open-minded, asking great, hard-hitting questions that made me think harder about the piece myself.”

Throughout the opera, Cerrone transforms voices electronically to exemplify the roughness of memory, using reverb, pitch-shifting, and granulation—effects that Cerrone says “suggest that our characters’ memories are flawed, foggy, or plain wrong.”

Director Schamberger noted that the use of electronics and sound effects helps prepare students for singing other contemporary works. “More and more modern composers use these kinds of effects. For the students, experiencing how to sing with a microphone and interpret the special needs these pieces require is part of why it’s important to produce these works at a school.”

The opera was paired with François Sarhan’s Hands, also conducted by Pierson and performed with the Contemporary Music Ensemble. Inspired by Charles Reznikoff’s Testimony, a document poem drawn from late 19th- and early 20th-century court transcripts, the short musical theater pieces that make up Hands refer both to manual labor and the physicality of the performance itself.

In a Grove marked the fifth Midwest or Chicago-area premiere of a contemporary opera at the Bienen School in less than a decade, following Ricky Ian Gordon’s The Grapes of Wrath (2013), Jake Heggie’s Dead Man Walking (2015) and If I Were You (2022), and David T. Little’s Dog Days (2019).

“Northwestern has demonstrated these last years a deep commitment to new music,” says Pierson, codirector of the Contemporary Music Ensemble. “Dean Toni-Marie Montgomery has been a passionate supporter of new music at Northwestern. She really had a vision of raising the level of new music at Northwestern and investing more intention into making it something that was happening at the highest level.”

Associate Dean Machado Announces Retirement

René E. Machado, associate dean for administration, finance, and planning since 2001, will retire from the Bienen School at the conclusion of the 2022–23 academic year. For more than two decades, Machado has expertly served the Bienen community during seismic changes as a key member of the school’s leadership team, heading efforts to improve music facilities, advance business operations, establish financial stability, and bolster academic opportunities.

“I care deeply about our school and have felt privileged over these many years to be part of a truly special music school community consisting of so many talented and dedicated faculty and staff members, along with extraordinary students,” Machado says. “I am proud of all that we have accomplished together to advance our school’s important mission and reputation as part of a great university in a vibrant environment.”

Early in his tenure, Machado focused on establishing financial and administrative infrastructures to help the school more effectively manage its resources. He created flexible systems to support the school’s ambitions and changing needs, working closely with departments and programs as well as partners across campus. In his newly created role, Machado developed departmental and program budgets, established a structure for faculty and staff appointments, and increased the school’s focus on technology.

In 2002, Machado developed a comprehensive space-needs assessment for a potential new music building in collaboration with faculty and Northwestern’s facilities management division. As chair of the planning committee for the new building, he oversaw major milestones, including a feasibility study, an architectural competition, construction, and in 2015 the building’s completion. Throughout the process, Machado and Dean Toni-Marie Montgomery visited various music facilities under development or renovation and spoke with faculty and administrators at those institutions. Thanks to extensive research, the Ryan Center for the Musical Arts has exceeded all expectations.

As part of his expansive role, Machado has also supervised the ongoing maintenance of other school facilities, including Pick-Staiger Concert Hall, Regenstein Hall of Music, and former school buildings. He has overseen overall academic administrative activities of the Bienen School, including integration of course planning and individually detailed appointments of more than 100 nontenured faculty members each year. He has also managed the Northwestern Music Academy, keyboard maintenance office, faculty support center, technology administration office, and other administrative areas.

Machado’s forward thinking and flexibility have served the school effectively through various challenges over the years, including the financial crisis of 2008 and the COVID-19 pandemic. During the pandemic, Machado met regularly with Northwestern administrators and medical experts and developed new processes to respond to the music school’s particular needs. His tireless efforts allowed the Bienen School to offer more in-person activities during the pandemic than any other Northwestern school.

“I am proud of all that we have accomplished together to advance our school’s important mission and reputation as part of a great university in a vibrant environment.” —RENE E. MACHADO

Before coming to Northwestern, Machado was assistant dean for administration at the Jacobs School of Music at Indiana University. Previously, he was administrative director and associate director of vocal studies at New York University. A countertenor, he specialized in vocal repertoire from the baroque to early 19th-century Italian opera. He performed as a soloist and member of various New York City-based ensembles, including Musica Sacra, Musica Aeterna, Camerata Singers, Bach Aria Group, New York Choral Artists, Sine Nomine Singers, Pomerium Ensemble, and Bel Canto Opera.

Director of Concert Management

It is almost as though the Bienen School were making up for lost time. The fall concert schedule featured a dizzying array of internationally renowned guest artists, regional and world premieres, and virtuosic displays by student soloists. Looking back, it is difficult not to marvel at a performance schedule that boasts can’t-miss concerts week after week, but our musicians and audiences alike were clearly up for the challenge.

Sir András Schiff provided a suitably auspicious start to the Skyline Piano Artist Series with his long-awaited recital as winner of the school’s 2021 Jean Gimbel Lane Prize in Piano Performance. His exquisitely performed program of Bach, Mozart, Haydn, and Beethoven amply demonstrated why Schiff is widely regarded as one of our greatest living pianists. Two weeks later, another sold-out audience in Galvin Recital Hall would become the latest to be astonished by the young phenom Yunchan Lim, who had claimed the gold medal at the 2022 Cliburn International Piano Competition just months earlier. The demand to witness 18-year-old Lim’s extraordinary talent was so great that hundreds gathered in the Regenstein Master Class Room for a simulcast of his performance. The embarrassment of pianistic riches continued with Angela Hewitt, considered one of the foremost Bach interpreters of our time. In addition to preludes and fugues from Bach’s Well-Tempered Clavier, Hewitt offered masterful renderings of Mozart piano sonatas and Chopin nocturnes.

The Bienen School welcomed several other notable guests last fall. Paraguayan guitarist Berta Rojas and lutenist Robert Barto returned to the Segovia Classical Guitar Series. Acclaimed vocalist and prolific composer and collaborator Joan La Barbara was in residence to offer lectures and master classes and to attend performances of her works by the Contemporary Music Ensemble and Northwestern University Chamber Orchestra. And no multiday celebration of Renaissance composer William Byrd would be complete without leading Byrd scholar Kerry McCarthy, who presented lectures and preconcert talks in conjunction with performances of Byrd’s choral and instrumental sacred and secular works.
Dizzy yet? We've barely begun to talk about the month of November, when we welcomed back to campus alumnus and San Francisco Symphony Orchestra principal percussionist Jacob Nissly ’05. Nissly performed Adam Schoenberg’s percussion concerto Losing Earth in the world premiere of the wind arrangement commissioned by Mallory Thompson and our Symphonic Wind Ensemble. Composer Christopher Cerrone also returned to Northwestern to witness the Midwest premiere of his newest opera, In a Grove, performed in the Ryan Opera Theater in a new production directed by Joachim Schamberger and featuring the Contemporary Music Ensemble conducted by Alan Pierson.

Our annual Concerto and Aria Competition affords the most impressive student instrumentalists and vocalists the opportunity to perform as soloists with our top ensembles. Under the direction of guest music director Donald Schleicher, cellist Luiz Fernando Venturelli ’21 offered a stunning performance of Prokofiev’s Sinfonia Concertante in E Minor with the Northwestern University Symphony Orchestra, eliciting a raucous ovation from the audience. Not to be outdone, soprano Kaytlin Withers and the Northwestern University Chamber Orchestra under the direction of Robert G. Hasty delivered a seemingly effortless performance of one of the 18th century’s great concert arias, Haydn’s Scena di Berenice.

In the new year, the Bienen School presented its first full six-concert Winter Chamber Music Festival since 2020. The opening weekend featured the return of the Calidore String Quartet, joined by young double bass virtuoso Xavier Foley, and a ravishingly beautiful all-Brahms program performed by members of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra and pianist Adam Neiman. The festival continued with appearances by the Isidore, New Orford, and Jupiter quartets as well as the Horszowski Trio’s festival debut.

Also in January, one of the world’s most sought-after countertenors, Northwestern alumnus Justin Kangmin Kim ’11, returned to his alma mater to work with student vocalists as part of the Tichio-Finnie Vocal Master Class Series. Finally, in early February, composer Ted Hearne attended the Bienen Contemporary/Early Vocal Ensemble’s brilliant performance of his Sound from the Bench. This compelling and fiendishly difficult work, a probing exploration of the US Supreme Court’s Citizens United decision, was executed masterfully under the direction of Donald Nally.

A Legacy of Excellence

Northwestern’s first African American dean has led the Bienen School to international prominence.
oni-Marie Montgomery, dean of the Henry and Leigh Bienen School of Music at Northwestern University since 2003, is stepping down in August after a distinguished two-decade tenure. As Northwestern’s first African American dean and the music school’s first female dean, Montgomery launched a host of initiatives that have increased the Bienen School’s visibility and enhanced its status as one of the nation’s top music schools.

Montgomery’s most enduring legacy is the world-class Patrick G. and Shirley W. Ryan Center for the Musical Arts, which opened in 2015. The 155,000-square-foot architectural gem, with breathtaking views of Lake Michigan, houses three outstanding performance venues along with faculty studios, administrative offices, and rehearsal and practice spaces. Reuniting the Bienen School community for the first time in four decades, the spectacular lakefront building fulfilled a dream shared by every previous Northwestern music school dean.

“I’m thrilled that for generations to come, Bienen School students and faculty will enjoy studying, practicing, and performing in the beautiful facilities of the Ryan Center,” Montgomery says. “For two decades, Toni-Marie has consistently pushed the Bienen School’s standards for excellence ever higher,” provost Kathleen Hagerty says. “The resulting leaps forward in scholarship and performance, facilities, and the core student experience under her leadership will be felt for decades to come.”

Montgomery has also shaped the school faculty, hiring two-thirds of its current tenured and tenure-eligible professors. Under her leadership, the school has developed numerous programs to heighten its visibility in the Chicago area, nationally, and internationally. As the school’s profile has risen, it increasingly attracts students of the very highest caliber and has become even more selective, with an undergraduate acceptance rate in recent years of just 10 percent.

“Toni-Marie proved herself to be one of our finest and most respected leaders over the past two decades,” says Northwestern president emeritus Morton Schapiro, who stepped down last September. “She strengthened the Bienen School at every level and made it one of the best places in the world for developing new generations of outstanding artists. She also wove the school more fully into the cultural fabric of Chicago, for the benefit of Northwestern and the region.”

Montgomery established two biennial international prizes that have brought renowned musicians to campus for performances and residencies. The $50,000 Jean Gimbel Lane Prize in Piano Performance showcases internationally prominent pianists in performances and master classes. And for the $100,000 Michael Ludwig Nemmers Prize in Music Composition, the dean partnered with the world-renowned Chicago Symphony Orchestra to present compositions by the award’s illustrious winners.

Also in Chicago, Montgomery arranged for the Bienen School to present annual concerts at Millennium Park and began a partnership with classical-music radio station WFMT for its nationally broadcast “Music from Northwestern” series. In the nation’s capital, the Bienen School was featured in the

“Toni-Marie Montgomery proved herself to be one of our finest and most respected leaders over the past two decades. She strengthened the Bienen School at every level and made it one of the best places in the world for developing new generations of outstanding artists.”

Conservatory Project of the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, a showcase for the best student artists from the country’s leading music schools. And with the support of Schapiro, the school shared its students’ talents on a global stage with the Northwestern University Symphony Orchestra’s first-ever Asia tour, which included concerts and alumni events in Beijing, Shanghai, and Hong Kong.

Montgomery has led the school in launching many programs to enhance the student experience. The acclaimed Dover Quartet, engaged as the music school’s first quartet in residence, gives annual performances and coaches student chamber ensembles. The Skyline Piano Artist and the Tichio-Finnie Vocal Master Class Series have increased campus residencies by prestigious guest artists. The school has been in the forefront of using technology in music, and its online Davee Media Library disseminates concerts, lectures, and master classes throughout the world. Since 2007, all students in Northwestern’s doctor of musical arts program have received full-tuition scholarships, a distinction shared with only two other US music schools.

The school has also increasingly focused on new music, notably through the founding of Northwestern’s Institute for New Music. This multifaceted center for performance and scholarship regularly brings leading composers and performers to campus for festivals, concerts, residencies, and symposia along with its biennial new-music conference, NUNC! The school’s Contemporary Music Ensemble, Bienen Contemporary/Early Vocal Ensemble, and other groups have presented numerous world premieres, including commissioned works, and Northwestern Opera Theater has given regional premieres of five operas by prominent contemporary composers.

Winning increased support for the school has been another success story of Montgomery’s deanship. In 2008 the School of Music was renamed in honor of retiring Northwestern president Henry Bienen and his wife, Leigh; donations from trustees, alumni, and friends of the University created an endowment that continues to fund scholarships and new initiatives. More recently, the school surpassed its ambitious fundraising goal for Northwestern’s We Will campaign. In response to the school’s top campaign priority, contributions established 23 new endowed merit aid scholarships and fellowships to recruit and retain outstanding music students. As a further legacy to the school, Montgomery has established a piano scholarship in her name and that of her late mother.

To further the school’s diversity, equity, and inclusion goals, Montgomery spearheaded a new undergraduate musicology core curriculum that provides a more inclusive and diverse representation of music history. The recently inaugurated Black Composers Showcase Series broadens the repertoires performed and studied at the school and educates students and the community about important contributions of composers of color. Music by Black American composers has long been a focus for Montgomery as a performer and educator, notably as a founding member of the Black Music Repertory Ensemble of Columbia College Chicago, and she is regularly invited to participate in public conversations and media interviews on the topic.

Montgomery is currently secretary of the Gateways Music Festival board of directors and a board member of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra Association and the Ravinia Festival. An accomplished pianist, she continues to perform on campus as well as across the US and the world.

“For two decades, Toni-Marie Montgomery has consistently pushed the Bienen School’s standards for excellence ever higher. The resulting leaps forward in scholarship and performance, facilities, and the core student experience under her leadership will be felt for decades to come.”

Tributes

"Dean Montgomery’s legacy is one of artistic and educational excellence. Her remarkable success at the Bienen School has been instrumental in bringing a whole new generation of fantastic musicians into the musical world."
—GIANCARLO GUERRERO ’92 MMUS, MUSIC DIRECTOR, NASHVILLE SYMPHONY

"Toni-Marie has served as an inspiration not only to me but for our entire field. She has brought excellence in performance and leadership with a grace that has left an indelible impact on so many young people and our field as a whole."
—AARON DWORKIN, FOUNDER, SPHINX ORGANIZATION

"What Toni-Marie Montgomery achieved during her time at Northwestern was remarkable and hugely impressive. I’m delighted and honored that I was able to be part of the Bienen School of Music family for part of her tenure, and I wish her everything good in the next stage of her career."
—SIR STEPHEN HOUGH, PIANIST, WINNER OF THE 2008 JEAN GIMBEL LANE PRIZE IN PIANO PERFORMANCE

"Toni-Marie Montgomery has been a sensational dean. We had high expectations when we asked her to become dean, and she exceeded them in every way: great appointments; fundraising; new programs. And she was critical in getting a tremendous new building for the school. She has been a historic dean."
—HENRY BIENEN, PRESIDENT EMERITUS, NORTHWESTERN UNIVERSITY

"I’m in awe of what Dean Montgomery has done for my alma mater. Beyond the obvious—the new building, the Lane and Nemmers Prizes, the new faculty—Dean Montgomery has made Bienen a more innovative and welcoming place. Initiatives such as the Institute for New Music, the Black Composer Showcase Series, and outreach to Chicago’s vast audience have positioned Bienen for the musical imperatives of the 21st century. It all makes me wish I could have studied at Bienen during Dean Montgomery’s tenure."
—HOWARD REICH ’77, FILMMAKER, AUTHOR, AND JOURNALIST

"The warmest mentor with charismatic leadership, Dean Montgomery is inspiring yet accessible. She always gives students endless support and devotes her time and energy to the Bienen community. Dean Montgomery is a remarkable leader, teacher, and musician."
—EUNAЕ LEE ’20 DMA, PIANIST

"Toni-Marie Montgomery has been a colleague, role model, inspiration, and dear friend for more than two decades. She is first and foremost a marvelous musician. As a leader, she is a critical and strategic thinker who has had a transformational impact on the Bienen School. As a colleague, she has been a trusted adviser to whom I have turned on countless occasions, and I am grateful for her generous and transparent counsel. My life has been enriched by Toni-Marie’s friendship, and I extend my very best wishes for all good things in the years ahead."
—JAMAL J. ROSSI, DEAN, EASTMAN SCHOOL OF MUSIC

"The warmest mentor with charismatic leadership, Dean Montgomery is inspiring yet accessible. She always gives students endless support and devotes her time and energy to the Bienen community. Dean Montgomery is a remarkable leader, teacher, and musician."

—JAMAL J. ROSSI, DEAN, EASTMAN SCHOOL OF MUSIC
“What Toni-Marie has done at the Bienen School is exemplary, a great achievement, and the result of endless hard work, curiosity, and imaginative, out-of-the-box thinking. I am now, and always have been, immensely proud to have been the first Nemmers Prize recipient.”

—JOHN ADAMS, COMPOSER, WINNER OF THE 2004 MICHAEL LUDWIG NEMMERS PRIZE IN MUSIC COMPOSITION

“Toni-Marie Montgomery's 20-year tenure as dean at Northwestern will continue to radiate positive ripple effects thanks to, among many other highlights, her unwavering commitment to the composing, performing, and disseminating of a kaleidoscopic variety of contemporary musics.”

—AUGUSTA READ THOMAS ’87, COMPOSER

“Toni-Marie is one of the most luminous and transformative people I’ve ever known; a builder, an adventurer, a connector, an artist, and a great soul who celebrates community through music. She has touched and influenced countless lives through the years—including my own life and creative perspective. There’s nobody like her, and I’m deeply grateful to be a colleague and friend!”

—JAKE HEGGIE, COMPOSER

“Throughout her career, Toni-Marie Montgomery has been a trailblazer. The school and community have benefited from her work to expand the school's profile in Chicago’s vibrant cultural scene, her dedication to supporting the creation of new music, and her successful pursuit of funding to remove financial barriers for promising students. The result is an internationally respected, thriving institution that is educating the next generation of musical artists and scholars at the very highest level.”

—RENNÉ FLEMING, SOPRANO

Toni-Marie Montgomery/Mattie Drayton Undergraduate Piano Scholarship

Montgomery has left an indelible mark on the Bienen School, devoting considerable energies to raising funds in support of undergraduate merit aid scholarships, which play a critical role in allowing the world’s most outstanding music students to enroll at Northwestern.

To honor Montgomery’s 20 years of service to the Bienen School, we invite you to contribute to the Toni-Marie Montgomery/Mattie Drayton Undergraduate Piano Scholarship fund.

Montgomery established this scholarship, in memory of her late mother, through her own estate gift; thanks to generous contributions from alumni and friends, the Bienen School will begin awarding the scholarship during Montgomery’s lifetime as a tribute to her service.

To make a gift in honor of Montgomery, scan the QR code or see page 35.

Mattie Drayton
Stephen Alltop (conducting) conducted concerts in honor of the 150th anniversary of the Apollo Chorus of Chicago. The Chicago Classical Review said of performances of Handel’s Messiah, “Alltop was consistently attuned to the nuances of Handel’s writing and brought out fresh details even in this well-worn work, which never sounded perfunctory in his hands.” He prepared the chorus for Mozart’s Don Giovanni and La clemenza di Tito at the Ravinia Festival with conductor James Conlon and the Chicago Symphony Orchestra and for the Chicago premiere of Karol Szymanowski’s King Roger for Chicago Opera Theater.

Theresa Brancaccio (voice and opera) coauthored the article “Closed-Loop Network of Skin-Interfaced Wireless Devices for Quantifying Vocal Fatigue and Providing User Feedback” in Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences. She continues to conduct collaborative research on preventing vocal fatigue with the Querrey Simpson Institute for Bioelectronics at Northwestern and Aaron Johnson ’95, ’99 MMus of New York University’s Langone Medical Center. Brancaccio also conducted a master class at Viterbo University in Wisconsin and was a judge for the National Association of Teachers of Singing central region competition in October.

George Cederquist (voice and opera) directed a workshop of Seth Boustead and J. Robert Lennon’s La Jettée at Chicago Fringe Opera, a staged reading of Curt Powell and Dolores Diaz’s musical Cargo at Chicago Dramatists, and an improvised opera based on Mozart’s Bastien und Bastienne at North Park University, where he serves as producing artistic director of opera and theater.

Alan Darling (voice and opera) mentored four young vocal coaches as a master teacher for the National Association of Teachers of Singing Intern Program. He returned for his 24th summer as a vocal coach at the Ryan Opera Center at Lyric Opera of Chicago and his ninth summer at San Francisco’s Merola Opera Program, where he taught the young artist singers and pianists. Darling coached singers and pianists in art song repertoire at Ravinia’s Steans Music Institute, and he played September and October recitals with the Mirror Visions Ensemble in Scotland, Illinois, and New York.

Drew Edward Davies (musicology), with colleagues Lucero Enriquez and Analia Chernavsky, presented the keynote lecture at the third international Répertoire International des Sources Musicales conference, “Musical Sources: Past and Future,” at the Academy of Sciences and Literature in Mainz, Germany. He also presented research at the...
University of Valladolid, Spain, and the American Musicological Society conference in New Orleans. In December, Orchid Classics released the recording El cielo y sus estrellas: Galant Cathedral Music from New Spain, which features 13 of Davies’s modern editions of music by Ignacio Jerusalem and other 18th-century composers, performed by the Camerata Antonio Soler and Javier Jose Mendoza.

Ryan Dohoney (musicology) organized the Northwestern fall residency of composer, performer, and sound artist Joan La Barbara in collaboration with the Institute for New Music. He published two essays on Chicago artist Theaster Gates in conjunction with exhibitions in London and New York City. He received a Northwestern COVID-19 Research Recovery Grant for the project “Wandelweiser; or, Friendship’s Silence and Dissonant Coalitions: Julius Eastman in New York City.”

Ryan Dohoney

Toni-Marie Montgomery (dean) joined the board of trustees of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra Association. She recently discussed her two-decade tenure at the Bienen School of Music in an episode of Arts Engines with Aaron Dworkin.

Steven Morrison (music education) led a panel discussion at the Big Ten Academic Alliance in Music Education annual meeting in Chicago on how emerging scholars can develop strong research profiles. He also presented a guest lecture on research methods at the Hart School of Music. With PhD student Aaron Himes and collaborators at the University of North Texas and Florida State University, he presented research at the National Association for Music Education conference in Maryland documenting comparable levels of music engagement among music majors and nonmajors.

Chicago Symphony trombonist Michael Mulcahy (trombone) conducted the CSO Brass in the December world premiere of Concert Music for Brass, Timpani, and Percussion by Timothy Higgins (trombone). Mulcahy also conducted Northwestern faculty and students in a Mentors and Protégés performance featuring music of Gabrieli, Mozart, and Berg.

Donald Nally (conducting) received his eighth Grammy nomination with The Crossing for best choral performance for Born, featuring the music of Michael Gilbertson and Edie Hill. The Crossing also performed on John Luther Adams’s Sila: The Breath of the World, nominated for best orchestral performance. Nally led The Crossing in the world premiere of George Lewis’s A Cluster of Instincts in September and Michael Gordon’s Travel Guide to Nicaragua in November at Carnegie Hall. In an NPR Tiny Desk Concert, the ensemble performed Shara Nova’s Titration, which the choir previously premiered. The Crossing recently released the album Carols after a Plague and performed on Tyondai Braxton’s album Telekinesis. Nally led the Bienen Contemporary/Early Vocal Ensemble in the world premiere of Light from the Heart by Augusta Read Thomas ’87.

Jesse Rosenberg (musicology) is one of three program instigators for “Decolonizing Theatre in the Long 18th Century,” a Sawyer Seminar funded by the Mellon Foundation. With Northwestern professors Tracy Davis (Communication) and Ivy Wilson (Weinberg), Rosenberg will coordinate a series of events and curricular offerings in 2023–24 about how performers and theater directors have grappled with issues relating to colonialism, imperialism, racism, patriarchy, and misogyny in works from the late 17th through early 19th centuries.

Desirée Ruhstrat (violin) and her Black Oak Ensemble received positive reviews for their latest album, Avant l’orage: French String Trios 1926–1939, featured as album of the week on Symphony Hall Sirius XM and nominated for a 2022 International Chamber Music Award. The latest album from Ruhstrat’s Lincoln Trio, Trios from Contemporary Chicago—which includes works by Chicago composers, including Augusta Read Thomas ’87 and Mischa Zupko ’94—was featured in Strings magazine.

Bernard J. Dobroski '81 PhD, professor emeritus and former dean of the Bienen School of Music, died February 19, 2023, at age 76.

Dobroski served the school in various capacities from 1974 to 2020. His 1990–2003 term as dean featured an emphasis on faculty and student recruitment, expanding course offerings for nonmusic majors, and community engagement programs.

Dobroski received a bachelor of fine arts degree in music performance from Carnegie Mellon University and a master’s in music performance and music history from the Catholic University of America. From 1968 to 1972, he was a tubist and keyboardist with the US Navy Band, a soloist with the US Navy Concert Band, a conductor and performer with the US Navy Ceremonial Band, and a leader of the US Navy Brass Quintet. He was also an instructor and director of the Preparatory Wind Ensemble of the Washington Youth Orchestra.

In 1981, Dobroski received an interdisciplinary PhD from the Northwestern School of Music, where he also studied tuba with Chicago Symphony Orchestra tubist Arnold Jacobs. After holding various administrative positions at the school beginning in 1974, he served as dean of the University of Oregon School of Music and department of dance from 1986 until returning to Northwestern in 1990 as the sixth dean of the School of Music.

Dobroski established new academic majors in music technology and music cognition, founded the Philharmonia orchestra for nonmusic majors, and started the joint degree program with the Medill School of Journalism. Reaching out to Northwestern and Chicago-area communities was high on his list of goals; he initiated the Kids Fare series of participatory programs for young children to attend with their parents. During his tenure, the Evelyn Dunbar Memorial Early Music Festival debuted in 1996, and the first annual Winter Chamber Music Festival took place in 1997. Notable events included a weeklong celebration of John Cage’s 80th birthday in 1992, with the composer attending, and a yearlong celebration of the school’s centennial in 1995.

Author of numerous articles in journals and other music publications, Dobroski edited the College Music Society’s national newsletter, contributed to Instrumentalist magazine, and was the founding editor of Accent, a national music education publication. He appeared frequently as lecturer, adjudicator, and clinician and performed as a tubist, conductor, and keyboardist throughout the US, in addition to serving on the boards of several regional and national organizations.

In 2003, Dobroski stepped down after 13 years as dean and assumed the John Evans Professorship in Music. He retired in June 2020 and was named professor emeritus. He is survived by his wife, Sally; children, Andrea and Paul; and five grandchildren.

American composer and author Ned Rorem '44, '77 H died November 18, 2022, at age 99. Born in Richmond, Indiana, and raised in Chicago, Rorem took piano lessons with Margaret Bonds ’33, ’34 MMus before enrolling at Northwestern’s School of Music. He went on to study at the Curtis Institute of Music, Juilliard School, and Berkshire Music Center in Tanglewood.

One of America’s most honored composers, Rorem received a Fulbright Fellowship (1951), a Guggenheim Fellowship (1957), and an award from the National Institute of Arts and Letters (1968). He received the ASCAP–Deems Taylor Award in 1971 for his book Critical Affairs, A Composer’s Journal; in 1975 for The Final Diary; and in 1992 for an Opera News article on American opera. His suite Air Music won the 1976 Pulitzer Prize in music.

In 1977, Rorem visited Northwestern to speak with music students in conjunction with a visit to hear the Chicago Symphony Orchestra’s performance of Air Music. Later that year, he received an honorary degree and delivered the School of Music’s convocation address. He made several other visits to Northwestern, including for the School of Music’s 1995–96 centennial celebration.

Rorem served as president of the American Academy of Arts and Letters from 2000 to 2003. In 2001 he was named a Chevalier of France’s Order of Arts and Letters for his contribution to the enrichment of French cultural inheritance, and in 2003 he received the Gold Medal in Music from the Academy of Arts and Letters and ASCAP’s Lifetime Achievement Award.

In 2013 the Bienen School’s Institute for New Music celebrated Rorem’s 90th birthday with a two-day festival that included concerts by the Bienen Contemporary/Early Vocal Ensemble, brass players from the Symphonic Wind Ensemble and the Civitas Ensemble, and faculty performers.

In memoriam

BERNARD J. DOBROSKI (1946–2023)

NED ROREM (1923–2022)
ROBERT J. WERNER (1932–2022)

Robert J. Werner ’53, ’54 MMus, ’67 DMus died in Roanoke, Virginia, on August 31, 2022, at age 90. A loyal donor to the Bienen School, Werner was a passionate advocate for comprehensive arts education. Beginning as a French horn player and high school band director, he progressed through a rewarding academic career to become dean of the University of Cincinnati College-Conservatory of Music. During his 15-year tenure, he oversaw the construction of the CCM Village, which enhanced the conservatory’s teaching and performance capabilities and advanced the school’s reputation as a leading center for performing and media arts. The 250-seat Robert J. Werner Recital Hall honors his legacy.

Werner was president of both the International Society for Music Education and the National Association of Schools of Music. He supported publications for community education programs as well as developmental frameworks for music education at elementary and secondary levels and received a Northwestern Alumni Association Alumni Merit Award in 1991. He is survived by his wife of 65 years, Sharon Mohrfeld Werner; his children, Mark, Kurt, and Erik; and many grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

DONALD EDWARD CASEY JR. (1950–2022)

Former faculty member Donald Edward Casey Jr. ’72, ’76 MMus died September 16, 2022, at age 72. He attended the Eastman School of Music as a trumpet major before completing his bachelor’s and master’s degrees at Northwestern and went on to earn a doctoral degree in music education from the University of Illinois.

From 1979 until 1995, Casey was associate professor of music education and assistant director of bands at Northwestern, where he conducted the Wildcat Marching Band, concert band, and a jazz ensemble and taught courses in conducting, arranging, and music education. In 1995 he was appointed dean of the DePaul University School of Music, where he served until retiring in 2014. His fundraising efforts helped secure the construction of DePaul’s Holtschneider Performance Center.

Throughout his career, Casey made more than 100 appearances as a music festival guest conductor and adjudicator in the US and Canada. He served on the board of the Grant Park Music Festival and led the design efforts for the music education software company Harmonic Vision. Casey and his wife, Christine (Olson) Casey ’72, ’76 MMus lived in Williamstown, Massachusetts, near their daughter, Erin Casey ’06 MMus.

CHARLES E. SCHROEDER (1935–2022)

Charles E. “Chuck” Schroeder, a longtime generous donor to the Bienen School, died September 16, 2022, at age 86. As a student at Dartmouth College, he formed a Dixieland jazz band that played on campuses around the Ivy League and ultimately at Carnegie Hall, on The Steve Allen Show, and at many other venues.

Born in Chicago, Schroeder graduated in 1957 from Dartmouth and in 1958 from its Tuck School of Business, later joining the Navy as an ensign. Upon completing his naval duty, he returned to Chicago, where he joined Miami Corporation as an investment analyst, eventually becoming president and CEO. Schroeder served as investment chair for the Northwestern Memorial Hospital Board and later joined the Northwestern University Board of Trustees, again as chair of investments.

Schroeder is survived by his wife, Elizabeth; his three children, Charles, Timothy, and Elizabeth (Hough); and many grandchildren and great-grandchildren. He requested that memorial gifts be made to undergraduate merit aid scholarships at the Bienen School.

DAVID ANDERSON (1971–2023)

David Anderson, supervisor of keyboard maintenance at the Bienen School, died of pancreatic cancer on January 30 at age 52. With a degree in anthropology-archaeology from Northwestern, he was also a member of the Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia professional music fraternity and played baritone in the Wildcat Marching Band under John P. Paynter ’50, ’51 MMus. Anderson later studied piano technology at Western Iowa Technical College.

Fortunate to find a career that combined his interests in music, engineering, and mechanics, Anderson became a registered piano technician in 1996 and belonged to the Piano Technicians Guild, running his own piano service business for 30 years.

In July 2012, he landed his dream job as a piano technician for the Bienen School, where he played a key role in planning and designing the keyboard maintenance workshop in the Ryan Center for the Musical Arts. He become supervisor of keyboard maintenance in 2020 and was also a piano technician for the Ravinia Festival and a tuner for the Chicago Symphony and other groups. Anderson is survived by his wife, Robin Keen Anderson, and daughter, Laurel Anderson.
On the National Stage

Bienen School students and alumni have been featured at Northwestern-sponsored events coast-to-coast over the past months.

Christopher Job '03, a member of the Metropolitan Opera's artist roster, performed in December at a Northwestern alumni and donor event in New York, where attendees met Northwestern president Michael Schill.
I spend a good deal of time thinking about the idea of “legacies” in my work. Legacies are things we leave behind—the impact of our lives on the lives of others. The Bienen School of Music is, in many ways, an amalgamation of the legacies of all the school’s past leaders.

After 20 years as dean, Toni-Marie Montgomery’s legacy of leadership at the Bienen School is clear. She was the driving force behind the opening of the Ryan Center for the Musical Arts, and she worked tirelessly to raise funds for merit aid scholarships for Bienen students. The effect of the building is apparent in both its impressive physical structure and the ways in which it inspires and facilitates collaboration among students and faculty. The influence of merit aid scholarships is both broad, helping the Bienen School enroll the brightest and most talented students, and deeply personal to the students who benefit from this assistance. Montgomery’s commitment to these priorities has allowed students to experience the best possible conditions in which to pursue their passion for music.

Montgomery will eventually leave another legacy to the school through a gift in her estate to endow an undergraduate merit aid scholarship in piano. To honor her 20-year tenure, a group of generous donors has come together to endow the Toni-Marie Montgomery/Mattie Drayton Undergraduate Piano Scholarship today, so that Montgomery will have the benefit of knowing the students who receive the scholarship. The fund will one day be supplemented by the gift from her estate.

When Montgomery arrived at the Bienen School in 2003, she began to build on the legacies of previous deans, including her predecessor, Bernie Dobroski. He passed away earlier this year, and his legacy is also an important part of the school’s history. Both Montgomery and Dobroski made the decision to invest in the Bienen School, and their gifts, along with those of thousands of music alumni and friends, help support the artist-scholars who will become the next generation of performing artists, arts administrators and educators, and arts advocates.

If you are already part of the legacy of generosity to the Bienen School, thank you. If you are not yet a part of that legacy, I urge you to consider how you could support future generations of music students through your own legacy of philanthropy.

As we bid a grateful farewell to Dean Montgomery, the Bienen School is fortunate that the next dean will inherit a tremendous legacy upon which to build the next chapter of excellence in the school’s history.

Rogers Society

The Henry and Emma Rogers Society honors and recognizes alumni and friends who have included Northwestern in their estate plans. The Bienen School is grateful to those members of the Rogers Society who have specifically designated their estate gifts to benefit the Bienen School.
